Rome Uses IntraLearn Learning Management System

e-Learning Software Reduces Training Costs for Rome City Employees

NORTHBORO, MA September 29, 2001 -- IntraLearn Software Corporation, a leading supplier of configurable e-Learning software, announced today that the city of Rome, Italy, is using the company's Learning Management System for its new online portal offering distance learning to city employees. Rome's IT consulting firms and Authorized IntraLearn Resellers, the RSO Group and INTES have standardized on the IntraLearn software platform for delivering e-Learning solutions to their clients.

Marcoaurelio (after the Roman emperor Marcus Aurelius) is the name for Rome's new e-Learning portal. Twenty-seven thousand employees of the city of Rome have access to the site, which includes a public area, accessible to anyone through the Internet (www.comune.roma.it/marcoaurelio), and a reserved area for the employees. Marcoaurelio includes a Knowledge Management System that makes a large collection of documents and services selectively available to the fifteen "professional communities" into which the city of Rome personnel has been grouped. The portal uses the IntraLearn Learning Management System to deliver training via distance learning to city employees. RSO and INTES designed the entire portal and used the IntraLearn software platform for the e-Learning segments.

"The city of Rome, the RSO Group and INTES are on the cutting edge of the emergence of e-Learning to Europe. The Rome project is a perfect example of the flexibility of our e-Learning platform. e-Learning leverages the cost-efficiencies of the Internet to solve governments' training and budget challenges-- not just the distance learning requirements of universities or of the private sector. IntraLearn has already integrated all of the necessary functional components of an online distance learning program, usually costing hundreds of thousands of dollars in customization fees, into a single affordable system," said Peter Banhazl, Executive Vice President at IntraLearn.

RSO spa is a primary consulting and training company that develops, in partnership with customers, innovation projects in the field of organization and management to increase individual competencies, promote training activities based on highly innovative methods and tools to develop empowerment processes that support people promoting changes.

INTES srl, a subsidiary of the RSO Group, is a fast-growing IT firm developing Web applications for Business Process Automation, e-Commerce, e-Learning and Human Resources Management. INTES' contribution gives the RSO Group the ability to fully support its customers as a global partner for innovation.
